Paris & London

“Integration and Multiculturalism”

May 22-June 5, 2010

Cost: $4,100

An International Faculty Development Seminar in Paris, France and London, England:

Explore the dynamic relationships between the diverse ethnic and religious communities of these two cosmopolitan cities that were once imperial capitals. Learn how the two governments have responded to immigration and multiculturalism, especially in the context of U.S. experiences. Hear lectures from scholars and practitioners in the field as well as visit sites and museums. In addition, participants will visit the USG European Council study abroad centers in Paris and London.

The seminar is open to all faculty members wishing to expand their international knowledge. Faculty members in the social sciences, humanities, arts, business and education are especially encouraged to apply.

Program fees include: Round trip airfare, accommodations, transportation from Paris to London, most excursions, and some meals.

Application Deadline is December 11, 2009

Applications are available at the USG European Council website under “Faculty” at www.valdosta.edu/europeancouncil
