Dalton Student A Finalist at Mr. ABAC Contest

TIFTON—Chandler Bartley from Dalton was named as one of the five finalists in the 2013 Mr. ABAC contest held recently at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College. The event was sponsored by the Family and Consumer Sciences Club.

Bartley, a junior agriculture education major, is the son of Karl and Tracey Bartley and was sponsored by the Sigma Alpha sorority. He also won the interview portion of the contest.

Logan Layne, a freshman Rural Studies major from Manning, S.C., won the Mr. ABAC title. Layne was sponsored by the ABAC Ambassadors.

Other finalists included Jake Todd, a freshman agriculture education major from Arnoldsville; Conor Dunn, a freshman English major from Omega; and Kevin Vantrees, a junior diversified agriculture major from Douglasville. Dunn also won the essay competition.

Clemente Oriciaga, a junior biology major from Tifton, was awarded the Mr. ABAC Spirit award for having the most audience support. The contestants created donation boxes to collect contributions for ABAC’s Relay for Life. The People’s Choice Award for most contributions went to Blake Johnson, a freshman economics major from Ocilla. Ronnie Few, a junior diversified agriculture major, was also awarded the People’s Choice Award for most creative and original design of his box.
